Language of Instruction: English
Contact Hours: 45
Instructor: On-Site Faculty

COURSE DESCRIPTION

The main goal of this course is to provide students with a general understanding of Spain, taking into consideration its recent past, but focusing mainly in some of the most relevant and controversial issues of the current situation. The use of movies as a vehicular tool allows not only for the introduction of the cultural factor, but also the very Spanish perspective(s) that helps understand how the country sees and understands itself.

The course will address the following general questions: a) what it means to speak of a "national cinema;" b) how cinema constructs and/or contests of his or her-story; c) cinema's impact on shifting notions of what constitutes the human condition; d) how the formal qualities of cinematic narrative shape on-screen stories; f) where and how issues of gender, sexuality, class, and ethnicity surface in cinematic articulations of the relationship between national identity, global trends and personal history.

There are five sections or blocks to this course. The first block will cover the Spanish Civil War and the subsequent Dictatorship, indispensable to understand the last 40 years of democracy in Spain. The second block is almost a monography to the figure of Pedro Almodóvar, his time and the ‘España’ his movies depict. The third one focuses on the genre of horror, very rich in the recent Spanish production and quite ‘imitated’ by Hollywood. These last two blocks serve as a good opportunity to reflect about the political/national/identity aspects of the cinema industry. In an attempt to reverse the perspective, the last two blocks approach current Spanish issues with an important impact in the society as a whole and its citizens as individuals. The fourth block discusses Spanish politics and its most recent developments. And the fifth one is a gender approach to the demographics of the country.

Course Objectives

This course seeks to provide an understanding of “culture” in cinematic form and the development of a vocabulary particular to the formal and thematic study of contemporary commercial cinema. To achieve this goal, the student will learn terminology (shot, sequence, frame, etc.) specific to discussion of the cinematic text. By the end of the course, the student should be able to critically examine the connection between cultural content and cinematic form.

Developmental Outcomes

Students should demonstrate:

- Responsibility and accountability
- Independence and interdependence
- Goal orientation
- Self-confidence
- Resilience
- Appreciation of differences

Methodology

Other than the introductory and the ‘bureaucratic’ sessions when the theoretical and methodological keys of the course will be set clearly, the semester is conceived as five differentiated blocks of three sessions. Each block includes a Spanish movie, a lecture, and an in-class reflection/debate about the topics and subtopics derived.

Required Readings/Materials

- Selection of articles and book chapters compiled by the professor (these will be available either electronically or as handouts)
- Tim Corrigan’s A Short Guide to Writing About Film (4th edition or newer, though any edition is fine, as I will clarify assignments in class)
- IMDB is an important resource for you to find basic information on each film. You must print out the basic info and the names of the characters/actors for use as a resource in class.

Assessment

Movie(s) Analysis (5 x 7% = 35%)

For each of the five movies watched in class, students will have to write a 1-2 pages article in the shape of a magazine article that proves not only the personal interpretation of the film, but also the capacity of learning about the Spanish reality through it. A rubric is provided later in this syllabus that specifies the information to be included and the format of these movie analyses.

Midterm (15%)

This Midterm Exam will consist of a multiple-choice exercise with around 50 questions about the specific data covered during the sessions so that students can prove a detailed and specific knowledge of the main historical/political/cultural/artistic events and characters.

Research and Presentation (20%)

Throughout the semester, students will have to work on a project that they will present to their classmates. The students are to choose a Spanish director and do research about his/her work (including watching at least 3 of his/her movies), and his/her significance for the Spanish cinematography and for the understanding of the Spanish reality in general. A rubric is provided later in this syllabus that specifies the information to be included, the format of the presentation and the different deadlines.

Final Exam (10%)

One topic from the ones covered in class to be explained in an essay-style. The approach and length of these questions will be completely free. The answer has to prove the student’s understanding of the specific topic by covering as much information from the theory lectures and from the classmates’ presentations as possible, but also his/her ability to link the different lectures, readings, seminars and activities in order to enrich the answer.

Participation (20%)
This class has a mandatory attendance policy. The participation and behavior during the class sessions will be monitored throughout the whole semester. Attendance is taken at the beginning of every class. Each unauthorized absence from class will result in a 3 percent reduction of the final grade (for example: an A- [92] will become a B+ [89]). More than two unauthorized absences are considered a pattern of repeated absences and will result in failure of the course and possible dismissal from the program.

A 100% attendance does not immediately translate into the full grade in this part of the evaluation, since participation also implies interaction with the professor and classmates and an active and positive attitude throughout the semester. Inappropriate behaviors such as sleeping in class or the use of computers or smart phones without permission (see ground rules for more), can lower this grade down to 0.

Ground rules

- Students are to read and fully understand this syllabus. The information contained in it is very important and provides the guidelines for the whole semester. Students cannot allege ignorance of its content during a possible conflict.

- The classroom door will remain closed after the first 10 minutes. Students are not allowed to come in once the door has been closed. Even if accepted (during the first 10 min.) lateness also affects the participation grade.

- When emailing the professor, make sure to state your name and group. Be aware that emails asking questions that can be solved by reading the syllabus will only receive the following response: “Answer to be found on the syllabus”.

- Food and drinks are not allowed in class (only water bottles).

- There will be a 10 minutes break.

- If a student needs to leave class early, tell the professor before the class starts.

- Students will not leave the classroom during the session.
- It is not allowed to record the classes by using any video or audio devices, nor to take pictures of the power point slides.

- Due to data & persona protection, it is absolutely forbidden to take pictures in the classroom that could include the professor or other classmates (breaks included) without an explicit consent.

- The use of smartphones during the class sessions is strictly prohibited.

- The use of laptops is not allowed during the class sessions, unless otherwise indicated.

- Students are not allowed to use any type of MP3, Ipod or similar while in class.

- Students who sleep in class will be called out and expelled.

Exam rules

- Students who cheat in exams will be expelled and penalized for such behavior. They will lose the grade in that exam.

- Students must complete exams using a blue or black pen, never a pencil or a red pen. Exams written in red pen or pencil will not be graded.

- When necessary, students must use a clear handwriting. Difficult exams to read (because of the handwriting) will not be graded.

Movie Analysis Worksheet

This worksheet is only a reference to remind you everything you must include in your work. You are encouraged to expand/enrich and include more information/details, but keep in mind that the 'final work' must look like a 1-2 pages single space (or 700 to 1400 words, Times New Roman, 12) movie magazine article, not like a filled in card. The first two movie analysis will receive an extensive feedback from the professor to help students improve the last three exercises. Note that, if this feedback is not taken into consideration and the same mistakes keep repeating, grade penalties will apply. Review the 'Movie analysis rubric' that follows this worksheet for more detail.

Don’t forget to use the materials from the lecture, readings and debate from the course.
Link the movie to others you have seen that can be related to this one in one way or another. How is this movie related to the Spanish reality? What was the most surprising part for you, what caused you a bigger impression? Why? Is it related to any personal experience? Other reviews of this movie you’ve read and your opinion on them.

General Instructions

Project and Presentation represent, together, a 20% of the grade. The specific weight of each part is: Content 10% & Presentation 10%. Both parts must be fulfilled in order to get this portion of the grade.
The general goal of the work is for you to research on a significant Spanish director and watch at least 3 of his/her movies so that you can grasp the tone and the overall intention of his/her movie career. The movies you choose to watch should be as separate in time as possible from each other.

You must have chosen your director and informed the professor by the end of the 4th week. During one of the first class sessions, the different recommended directors will be talked about to help you choose according to your interests. You are responsible to find the chosen movies on your own.

The final product must be a power point (or similar) to be used the day of the presentation and to be shared with the classmates (in pdf format). It should include at least, but not only:
- An introduction to your director from your personal perspective (find a thesis to defend)
- A brief biography of the director you chose focused in his/her work (personal life only when relevant) and his/her importance to the Spanish cinematography
- The analysis and interpretation of the 3 movies of this director you have watched, with a focus on what aspects of Spain can be better understood thanks to his/her work.
- Conclusions (also from a personal/critical perspective).

All students must have provided the pdf format of their presentation.

On the day assigned for the presentations:
- Be punctual
- Make sure your power point (or similar) can be located easily/quickly
- Don’t read from notes or power point, present your topic
- Keep the audience engaged and make them part of the presentation

Review the ‘Research & Presentation rubric’ that follows these guidelines for more detail.

POLICIES

Attendance Policy

Students are expected to be on time and attend all classes while abroad. Many instructors assess both attendance and participation when assigning a final course grade. Attendance alone does not guarantee a positive participation grade; the student should be prepared for class and engage in class discussion. See the on-site syllabus for specific class requirements.

University of Minnesota Policies & Procedures

Academic integrity is essential to a positive teaching and learning environment. All students enrolled in University courses are expected to complete coursework responsibilities with fairness and honesty. Failure to do so by seeking unfair advantage over others or misrepresenting someone else’s work as your own can result in disciplinary action. The University Student Conduct Code defines scholastic dishonesty as follows:

Scholastic Dishonesty

Scholastic dishonesty means plagiarizing; cheating on assignments or examinations; engaging in unauthorized collaboration on academic work; taking, acquiring, or using test materials without faculty permission; submitting false or incomplete records of academic achievement; acting alone or in cooperation with another to falsify records or to obtain dishonestly grades, honors, awards, or professional endorsement; altering forging, or misusing a University academic record; or fabricating or falsifying data, research procedures, or data analysis.

Within this course, a student responsible for scholastic dishonesty can be assigned a penalty up to and including an "F" or "N" for the course. If you have any questions regarding the expectations for a specific assignment or exam, ask.

Student Conduct

The University of Minnesota has specific policies concerning student conduct. This information can be found on the Learning Abroad Center website.
