Course Description

This course is designed to expand and enhance knowledge of the Spanish language and the ability of students to write, speak, read and understand Spanish by integrating students to the real Spanish-speaking world in Mexico.

The class will consist of the teacher and no more than five students. Students will write summaries of the various texts. Articles from newspapers or magazines, as well as videos used in class. After each reading or video a round table discussion will be implemented to analyze, discuss and interpret the text or video information. The class also will include a grammar correction, audio exercises, reading comprehension and writing and editing processes for students to have the opportunity to improve their language skills.

FOST 3214 (3011W) will provide opportunities to continue the development of language skills initiated in Spanish during 1004. This course presents a compilation of various literary texts of important authors of different genres (essay, novel, short story, etc.), Which emerged in the second half of the twentieth century and show a picture of the real Mexico described in a fantastic manner where the unreal is shown as a daily occurrence.

Course Objectives

Students will be able to:

- Express themselves spontaneously, with fluency and vocabulary adapted to the context.
- Present speech organized in a logical and coherent manner.
Learning Outcomes

The course is structured so that the four essential linguistic modalities—speaking, writing, reading, and understanding—continuously reinforce each other and students should become adept in these modalities at a PAGE 2 level that is expected of both majors and minors. Besides mastering the arts of conversation and reading, the student will be generating a series of creative and original compositions and written projects for this course. The goal is to continue the process of learning to write clear, accurate, formal, Spanish prose in a range of styles employing diverse compositional strategies. The student will likewise continue the development of fundamental skills and perceptions as a critical reader, critical thinker, and analyst regarding his own writing as through revision sessions as part of the process-writing technique.

Methodology

During this course FOST 3214 (SPAN 3011W), the teacher leaves the central role and becomes a facilitator, providing students with the alternatives and strategies to develop skills and attitudes that encourage learning.

The teacher creates a harmonious environment of trust that promotes the interaction between students and teacher which encourages the participation of students and allows increasing student autonomy in the language.

Students are expected to be on time and attend all classes while abroad. Many instructors assess both attendance and participation when assigning a final course grade. Attendance alone does not guarantee a positive participation grade; the student should be prepared for class and engage in class discussion. See the on-site syllabus for specific class requirements.
